Crampton, who is prominently identified with the Rutland company. From Mr. Crampton they learned that new material for a line could be bought to better advantage than could second-hand. It was his opinion that the line of two and a-half miles' length could be built in Brattleboro for about $5000 per mile. The outlook for dividends at the start would not be encouraging, but there would be a prospect that in a few years' time the business could be worked up to a paying basis.

The body of Elbridge Houghton of Putwhose tragic death was recorded in The Phoenix two weeks ago, was recovered last Saturday, late in the day. Horace Goodenough, who was fishing on the New side of the river near the J. Henry Pratt farm, saw the body floating down, but as no boat was at hand he was unable to secure it. People in Hinsdale and Vernon were notified, however, and the body was taken from the water at the ferry between the two places, it is understood. It was taken to Putney for burial.

Warren S. Harris, the only surviving brother of Fred H. Harris of this village, died at his home in Fitchburg, Mass., on Monday, after a short illness from pnenono-nia. Mr. Harris was a native of Chesterfield, N. H., born there in 1812, and was one of a family of six children of the late Erastus Harris. Besides Fred IL, a sister, Mrs. Charles E. Alexander of Guilford, and another sister resident in St. Paul. Minn., survive. Mr. Harris grew up in Chesterfield. He was at one time en-gaged in business in Brattlebero, and was settled for a time in the West, but had lived in Fitehburg for some 20 years past. He is remembered by many Brattleboro friends as a genial, companionable man, with a never-failing fund of anecdote and dry wit. He had been a frequent visitor in Brattleboro and during the con struction of the narrow gauge railroad was a sub-contractor for portions of the work under Harris Bros. & Co. Announcement comes from Waterbury that that portion of the new state insanasylum which has been in course of construction at that place is now practically completed and ready to receive the furniture. It is expected that about 125 state patients will be removed there from the Brattleboro asylum by the first of August. The wing which has been built comprise about one-third of the buildings contem plated in the plans for the institution.

Dr. Draper spent Wednesday on the mountain with a party of workmen opening views through the trees and shrubbery at the angles and other points of observa-tion on the mountain road. The openings thus made give outlooks upon the village and up and down the valley and on the hills around. A dozen sign-boards were erected upon the trees to designate various ocalities along the road. This completes for the present the work upon the moun-tain road, the construction of which has added an entirely new and unique feature to the summer attractions of Brattleboro. It is now fully open for the public use.

A very elegant wedding was celebrated at the First Presbyterian church in Plainfield, N. J., last Monday evening when Miss Elinor M. Shepard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus D. Shepard of New York city, was married to Mr. John Doull Miller, the son of a wealthy London merchant. A special train carried the New York guests to Plainfield, and the ceremony at the church was followed by a brilliant reception at "The Gables," Mr. Shepard's country house. The mother of the bride was formerly Miss Joanna Mead, of Brattleboro, daughter of Larkin G. Mead, senior, and sister of the sculptor and of Charles L. Mead and Wm. Rutherford Mead of New York.

From the accounts given in the Indianapolls papers it is evident that Mary Howe has never achieved greater honors or earried her audience more completely by storm than on her appearance at the Indianapolis music festival last week. The corps of artists engaged for the festival was a distinguished one, with Emma Juch at its head, but it was Miss Howe who aroused the greatest enthusiasm. The In-dianapolis Journal, after speaking of the "It was when Miss Howe appeared that enthusiasm burst its bounds. THE QUESTION

There has been a good deal of talk with-n a week about a fishing party which was co swoop down on Mariboro south pond, and fish there all they pleased, notwithstanding that the New England Trout and Salmon club controls the pond and have stocked it with fish, and intend to keep it as a pri-vate preserve. It was understood that the fishing was to begin last Saturday, and it was currently reported that 150 men, mostly from Mariboro and the west part of the town, had agreed to stand by each other and fish when they pleased, but as yet they have not visited the pond. The law is that any pond of more than 75 acres is public property for fishing purposes, but when the New England Trout and Salmon club was formed it purchased all the land around the Marlboro pond. The club is able, therefore, to arrest for trespass anybody who crosses the land to get to the pond. The party proposing to do the fishing last Saturday had planned to come up the outlet to the pond, carrying a boat, with which they would reach the fishing grounds. They claim that in this way they are not guilty of trespass. It has also been said that the town of Mariboro could lay out a road to the pond.

An article in the Boston Globe last Frilay has caused considerable comment from W. Turner, a millionaire silk manufacturer, bought the land around the old North pond in the town of Hebron, Conn. The ond has been famous for fishing since the ountry was first settled. Mr. Turner atempted to prevent fishing in the pond, but ally has been the result. Various opinions were expressed in regard to the so-called labor-saving inventions. A variety of laundry forks were exhibited, showing that such useful articles could be tastefully made and also better adapted to the work than an old broom handle. One of the ladies gave some very useful hints in regard to the sanitary cor dition of many farm buildings and their surroundings. We feel sure that some

14,350 MEMORIAL DAY IN BRATTLEBORO.

The Leasuns of Self-Sacrifice, Loyalty and Patriotism.

Memorial day, the day devoted to the memory of the brave men who offered their lives for their country and their country's

6,462 flag, when the thought of all is directed in especial manner toward patriotism, loyalty, 7,150 bravery and self-sacrifice, was appropriate 13,740 by observed on Saturday by Brattleboro, 9,905 her veterans and their auxiliary organiza-12,758 | tions, citizens, militia and school children. 7,330 The heavy rain of Friday had brightened 11,500 the foliage and grass, making everything fresh and beautiful, and though the morning of Memorial day was threatening, it eleared away and the afternoon was pleasant. Before the exercises of the day opened, at 2 o'clock, the hall was filled to overflowing, and many who could not get seats stood through the entire service. The Grand Army, Sons of Veterans, Woman's Relief corps, Ladies' Aid society of the Sons of Veterans, and a large number of pupils from the different grades in the High school building, escorted by the First Regiment band, and detachments from the Estey Guard and Fuller Battery, marched to the hall and took the seats reserved for the visit each grave, and on the sounding them, while on the platform were officers of the bugle all placed their tributes of of the Grand Army, disabled veterans, citizens and clergy, and the orator of the day. The whole front of the platform was a mass of flowers, laurel wreaths and handsome floral designs being tastefully arranged. Dr. B. F. Ketchum presided at the exercises, which opened with a selection by the band, followed by prayer by the post chaplain, George E. Selleck. Brattleboro ladies' quartet gave two selec-tions very acceptably, and Miss Lulu Brackett repeated by request the poem 'Gettysburg," which she gave on a former similar occasion, her rendering bringing out admirably the fire and spirit of the The orator of the day, Gen. Horatio C. King of Brooklyn, N. Y., was introduced, and his address was listened to with inter-est. In opening he alluded to the fame which Vermont had won by glorious deeds of war, from the days of Ethan Allen, Stark and Warner in the Revolution, to the four years of the Civil war, when the Green Mountain boys covered themselves with glory, winning a reputation for courage of the highest type, and always to be depended upon in an emergency. The grand work of the Vermont brigade under Stannard at Gettysburg was pictured anew, and scenes from that three-days' struggle the Confederate Waterloo, were vividly portrayed. The speaker chose for his theme those three great characters, to whom the thoughts of all turn at this time, who stand out boldly against the history of the war period—Lincoln, Grant and Sherman. If it is true, he said, that circumstances make men, so it is equally true that God raises up men to meet special and great emergencies. The gentle and yet great-hearted Abraham Lincoln belongs to both categories. Like Washington, he pos-sessed an honesty which could not be shaken, an unselfishuess which no ambition could affect and a patriotism that held love of country and love of God almost co-equal. Since Washington, no one ever entered the presidential office beset with more perplexing problems or greater responsibilities. The country was divided in political sentiment, disloyalty ruled alike in the North and the South, Congress bound the hands of the President by refusing to vote on important measures, business was paralyzed, nen were unconcerned. But through the dark hours Lincoln steered the ship of state past every danger. Through all the war the people leaned on him, never losing faith, though disaster followed disaster On the part of the sobliers there was the deepest faith in him, and no thought of a peace which should involve the dismember ment of the nation. At the zenith of his fame and glory, Lincoln died a martyr to the cause for which he had struggled so long. The darkness of despair fell on the whole nation. His loss at this critical juncture cannot be properly estimated, tarded reconstruction and the restoration of good feeling many years. The whole nation looked to him for a speedy settle-ment of the difficult problems arising from the changed condition of the labor que in the South. It has been said that "after the lapse of 20 years the high estimate of be discovered. him that the world appears instinctively to have formed at the moment of his death seems to have increased rather than diminished, as his participation in the great The offence is punishable by five years events of his time has been more thoroughimprisonment, $500 fine, or both ly studied and understood." Grant, the second great figure of the war, the soldier born, the silent man of destiny, required a great emergency to develop and bring out his highest characterispondered, he executed. In the hour of victory he was as magnanimous to the vanquished as he was relentless in battle, The one unselfish purpose which he kept steadily in view, the restoration of the Union, accomplished, he began forthwith the rebuilding of the shattered South. beaten enemy became the object of his tender solicitude. The parole which he granted he compelled the government to respect. The nation which trusted him, sustained him in this critical period. He lived to see the whole land at peace, and when the dread messenger came the South mingled tomb. He fought for principle and not for aggrandizement. He bound the Union together with bands of steel. The nation founded by Washington, and saved by Lincoln, was cemented and made perpetual by

Grant.

Sherman, so recently gone from us, was laid to rest with a sorrow as of a personal loss by all soldiers. At the opening of the war Sherman was almost alone in understanding and foretelling the greatness of the coming struggle. On being appointed a colonel he put into the conflict his best energies and a burning zeal, showing himself fertile in resources, indefatigable energy, wonderful in strategy and unflineh-ing in purpose, and he led his men, who adored him, to repeated victory, until at last he pierced the empty shell of the Confederacy and showed how futile was further resistance to the veteran legions, patriotic and invincible; in a word, the finest ave charge of the meetings,

Rev. C. O. Day will conduct the services and generous, his last official act as general of the army was to anticipate his compulsory retirement by two years in order that Sheridan, who had not the promise of his own personal reminiscences of the man and soldier many incidents of interest, showing his intense patriotism, his gentleness and generosity and kindliness of na-ture which made him so many warm personal friends. He belonged to the whole army, east and west, and in the last years the demands which his popularity made upon him told upon his strength; but he never could refuse his old friends. Allusion was made to Sherman's last public appearance, the occasion being the tion of flags to two schools in Brooklyn. where he made an effective and patriotic address. Though misjudged and calumniated he lived it all down, and at his death New York saw one of its three great funeral pageants, the spontaneous tribute of the people attesting the sincerity of their re-spect, admiration and affection for the hero and general not only, but the genial man and true friend. In closing the speaker said: "As we recall the country for which you and I, comrades, were ready to lay down our lives our hearts are filled with gratitude and our lips fervently exclaim. My God, what a country! Sixty millions of freemen bear aloft the banner of liberty and extend a welcome to the oppressed of all nations of the earth. * The influence of American institutions is felt in the remotest parts of the globe, and as the citizen of Rome, in the days of its greatest glory, ex-claimed proudly, 'I am a Roman,' so may we stand before the world and exuitant cry.

'I am an American!" At the conclusion of the address the audience, led by the band and the quarter joined in singing "America," after which line was formed and the procession took it way to the common, where the soldiers' monument had been decked with ropes of green, floral designs and flags. A hollow square was formed about the monument the band played a dirge and prayer was or fered by Rev. C. O. Day. Line was again formed and proceeded to the cemetery, sainte being fired as the procession neared the hill. Upon reaching the cemetery Rev. Mr. Webb offered prayer, the band played an appropriate selection, and ranks were broken for decorating the graves of the fallen soldiers. Members were detailed tender memory on the mounds at the same time, a detachment visiting the Catholic cemetery to perform the there. Banks were again formed, and af-ter the firing of a salute by the Estey Guard, and the benediction, the line r turned to Grand Army hall and disbanded. Saturday morning a number of the members of Sedgwick post visited West Brat tleboro. They were met by the West Brattleboro band and escorted to the cemetery where exercises were conducted, consisting of prayer by Rev. Mr. Smith, addresses by Prof. H. H. Shaw and Gen. A DASTARD'S WORK.

Several Dogs Die from Poisoning. Brattleboro has a dastard, who will feel the heavy arm of the law if he is discov ered. He began his operations last week Thursday by poisoning a valuable bull-dog owned by H. O. Coolldge. The dog was seized with spasms and died suddenly. Since then dogs belonging to J. H. Hoblen, C. F. Reed, Chas. H. Thompson, Charles Spring and Mr. O'Connor have died in a similar way, and physicians have given i as their opinion that they were poisoned with strychnine. A dog owned by Harry Kinson and another owned by Col. Hol-brook, but cared for by Frank Weeks, were poisoned, but antidotes were applied and they recovered. Some of these dogs were very valuable, and in every case they were prized by their owners.

It is evident that the dogs were poisoned on Prospect hill, for they all belonged, or had been in that section just before giving appearance of being poisoned.

On Monday morning E. D. Reed and J. G. Newton, who live on Thomas street. wered in a corner of the fences east of Mr. Newton's premises pieces of pork and cheese rind which were covered with Paris green. They think that a pound of the poison had been used or scattered about. On Tuesday it was noticed that the brush in the corner where the Paris green was found had been thrown about during the night by some person. The place is one which is frequented by dogs as it is near where they crawl through the holes in the fence. The owners of the dogs are investigating the case. and some of them think that they have cines through which the perpetrator will

THE EVENING SCHOOL SESSIONS. The exemplification of the work of the public schools by evening sessions held in the High school room, which was begun on Wednesday evening, is proving a decided success. On that evening the little ones from the six primaries had their innings, and a large attendance of fathers and mothers showed that there is, after all, a general and genuine interest in the work of the schools. The children from the several schools were brought together as one school, and the three classes showed what they had been taught to do in the rapid use of numbers, in learning fractions, in reading both from studied lessons and from sight, and in spelling. The several divisions or classes were taken in hand successively by the different teachers, and drilled in their various lines of work. By this means it was shown how, under wise supervision, the children of all the primaries are kept in line, and move step by step at a uniform pace in the studies taken up, so that the work accomplished under one teacher is that which is accomplished by every other teacher, and the children therefore come from those schools into the next grade ready to take up the advanced work as a unit. The eager and intent faces, the quick answers given without apparent effort, and the evident interest felt by the children in their studies were a pleasure to see. The simple method by which the little ones learn fractions without ever knowing it makes the older heads of today wish that such ways had been thought of 30 or 40 years ago, when that part of the early arithmetical training was a bugbear and a terror. Last evening Miss Sherman's class, the fourth grade of the Intermediate gave a similar exemplification of the work done by them before an equally interested WEST DOVER.
